Thanks

We want to thank Rev. O. D. Moore for his very valuable contribution to the TIMES-VIRGINIAN as writer for the "Pastor Speaks." Many readers have expressed their appreciation, also, for his helpful messages in this column. Reverend Thomas A. Waddill, pastor of Spout Spring Baptist Church, has kindly agreed to be responsible for continuing the column. If there are other clergymen in the area interested in contributing, we ask them to get in touch with Mr. Waddill in order to plan for the continuing publication of the "Pastor Speaks."

Mr. Moore, along with many other fine people in this community, has used his time and talents to provide good reading in the TIMES-VIRGINIAN. We remain indebted to our many correspondents and to other individuals such as Mr. Moore and Mr. Waddill, who, with no tangible reward in return, continue to enrich the lives of our readers.

Pastor Speaks

It gives me real pleasure to be able to speak to the people of Appomattox County and readers of the Times-Virginian in other areas of the country through this column. I was honored when Mr. Vaughan asked me to continue this feature initiated by Rev. Moore. We are indebted to both Mr. Vaughan and Rev. Moore for the important place which this feature has come to fill since its introduction several years ago.

The role or religion in the life of the average American has undergone a radical change in the past half century and this change is continuing today. Religion is becoming a mask to cover up the face which the heart abiding devotion to God, the Lord Christ, and His church is all but a thing of the past. Many people feel that mankind has moved past the age of "horse & buggy" Christianity. We now need a jet age religion which is adoptable to expediency!

In these times as never before Christians need to be dedicated to the principles of a historical Christianity. It is imperative that we show the world that Christian principles are as sound and workable in our day as they were when the Lord gave them.

To this end we shall be considering, for a number of weeks, the bases for Christian beliefs. We shall try to give our reasons for being a Christian and seek to understand the guidebook of Christianity, the Bible.

I should hope that we might have guest articles from time to time. I invite your comments and suggestions concerning the column. Thank you for reading this and pray for my success in this undertaking.

Dependable

Lesson for August 23, 1964

A student waiter in the school dining hall was complaining about another waiter. "He just took off without saying anything about it, and the rest of us had to carry his job. There wasn't time to get a substitute." Now the student who walked off the job leaving the others with extra work, and all without letting any one know he was leaving, may have been a very good waiter. But he won't stand a good chance of being recommended for the job next year if he keeps up this sort of thing. No matter how good he is at waiting on table, if he can't be depended on, he's not a good prospect. Dependability is what makes all good qualities strong.

God At The Center

The heart of the matter, as usual, is to be found in the Bible. Deuteronomy 6:4-7 is as good a place as any to find dependability — not the word but the thing itself — described plainly. What are the qualities of a dependable life? First of all, it is one that has God, the true God, at the center. It is life oriented to God, taking orders from him. Centrally it is a life filled with love for God. This means devotion, admiration and not mere adoration, it means loyalty through thick and thin. Now there were few if any atheists in those days. Belief in God, some kind of God, was to be found everywhere. Constantly, through all their prophets, the Hebrews were remined of what kind of God the true and only God is.

Inside And Out

The heart — to modern ears — means the emotions. But when the new prophet said love God with all your heart, he did not mean love him with all your emotions. Loving God with emotions only turns worship into a kind of binge. The Hebrew word could almost be translated "stand By;" — stand by your God with all your loyalty and all your dedication. The "heart" meant the springs of life, the motives at the very center of a man's life. The point is that in the character of a good man or woman there is an inner and outer side. The outer side is his actions, habits, what we see of him. The inside is what he really is; and if what he is, is not right, then what he does will be all wrong. Nobody likes to be called a hollow person, yet that's just what any of us is if the strength is not there, the God-created strength, on the inside.

Weekdays and Sundays

We don't know whether Moses meant to be taken literally or not when he ordered the Israelites to write the laws on their heads and hands and on the doorposts of their houses. They took it literally, anyway, and tied on their foreheads and on their wrists tiny boxes containing quotations from the Law. Jesus rather made fun of this practice, because it had become a substitute for actually keeping the Law. Anyhow, one point is clear. The conduct, the habit-patterns, the ambitions, the purposeful actions of a man belong in his head and hands and home. What he thinks, what he does, where he goes — his home life and his work life — should be all of one piece. You can't live selfishly six days in every week and then break out into unselfishness on Sundays. You can't be dependable as a man and a Christian on one day devoted to goodness. The six bad days will vote the one good day down. People have often tried to divide their lives into compartments, in some of which they could do as they pleased and in others they would conform to what they took to be the will of God. Isn't that in fact what most of us do? How often in the course of an ordinary week day do we ask ourselves, "What will people think?" and how often do we ask, "What does God think?"

What society expects may be good; what God demands is good. It seven days a week.

Laurence Gilliam

Laurence Gilliam, 81, of Appomattox, passed away Friday evening, August 14, in St. John's Nursing Home in Lynchburg. He was the son of Charles Bruce Gilliam and Betty Cobb Gilliam, of Amecmattox County. He is survived by his wife, Eunice Anderson Gilliam; a sister, Mrs. Roland Campbell, of Lynchburg; a nephew, Laurence Gilliam Wilkerson, of Fincastle, Virginia, and a niece, Mrs. Celeste Floyd, of Prospect, Va. Funeral services were held Monday, August 17, at the Oakey Funeral Home in Roanoke, Va., and interment was in Evergreen Burial Park, Roanoke. Rev. James Cravens, a former pastor of Liberty Baptist Church and Rev. Charles G. Fuller, of the First Baptist Church of Roanoke, conducted the services. Pallbearers were A. R. Harwood, Jr., and R. B. Wilbun, of Appomattox, Robert Bradner, Jr., of Charlotte Court House, Roland Campbell, of Lynchburg, John W. Geibel, Beauford Eubank, Louis Martin, and Robert Turner, Jr., all of Roanoke.

Mr. Gilliam was born in Appomattox County in 1883. In his younger days he operated a shoe store in Farmville, Virginia, and later traveled for a shoe firm in Brockton, Mass. In 1901 he moved to Roanoke and in 1922 he married Miss Eunice May Anderson, of Louisville, Ky. When residing in Roanoke he was in the retail coal business and was president of the Retail Coal Merchants' Assn. for a number of years. He was also past president of the Roanoke Retail Merchants Assn., a member of the Lions Club, Chamber of Commerce, a deacon of First Baptist Church and president of the Men's Fellowship Bible Class.

In 1939 he and Mrs. Gilliam moved to Rich Creek, Va., where Mr. Gilliam established the American Cinder Block Co. While living there he and his wife were members of the Narrows Baptist Church. Mr. Gilliam was a member of the Narrows Kiwanis Club and of the Giles County Chamber of Commerce.

In 1947 he sold his factory and returned to Roanoke, retiring from active business at this time. In 1952 he and his wife moved to Appomattox. During the past ten years Mr. Gilliam was in declining health. He was a member of the Liberty Baptist Church.
